DISINFECTANTS.

WATSONS

CARBO-CAMPHILENE

Is particularly useful for the toilet and for the direction of BATHROOMS, SICK ROOMS, BEDROOMS, CHAMBERS, COMMODES, &c., as in places of bad smells it leaves a refreshing colour.

AS A SAFEGUARD

A little sprinkled on the laundry-basin or on cotton wool and kept in front of the nose and mouth in sick-rooms and infected districts is strongly recommended.

FOR SICK ROOMS AND BEDROOMS.

A temperous in each Cancer distributed round the Room or evaporated by the aid of a lamp.

FOR SPEINKLING OR SPRAY.

A Wine Glassful to a Pint of Water.

CARBOLIC POWDER.

For the purification of HOUSES, CHAMBERS, DRAINS, WATER-CLOSETS, &c., and for the disinfection of SICK-ROOMS.

CARBOLIC ACID.

For Disinfecting Purposes.

Half an ounce (about one table-spoonful) of this Acid, when well mixed with one quart of water, forms a superior disinfecting and deodorizing fluid.

Half a pint of the Solution thus formed, when added to any vessel used in the sick-room, will prevent any unpleasant effluvia, and preserve the comforts for Medical inspection. It also purifies drains, water-closets, &c.

A TONIC-SPOUT OF CARBOLIC ACID exposed on a plats or other vessel in a sick-room will purify the air and prevent conflagration.

PERMANGANATE DISINFECTANT.

Similar to Coudé's, but cheaper, 80 cents a Quart Bottle. A nice can of Disinfectant for Dwelling-rooms and Bath-rooms.

CHLORINATED LIME.

DEATH.

At sea, on board the steamer (Glazeborn, Henry Street, of Foveaux, aged 40. (By telegram.)

JESSE.

The P. & O. steamer Contra left Singapore for this port yesterday at 6 a.m.

A Japanese paper reports that the Cardigan Bay has been sold to the Hokkaido Coal Mining and Railway Co. It is believed to be £15,000 sterling.

Information has been received by Messrs. Bowditch, Carrill & Co., the agents, that the steamer, from Hungary to Hongkong with 2,000 tons of coal, goes ashore in the Hainan Islands. It was reported that she would get off discharging about a thousand tons of her cargo into lighter.

At Yokohama on the 1st inst., two men each found in the water opposite the Grand Hotel five Mexican dollars; and the next morning five men discovered in front of N. S. four packages of $10 each. The money has been handed over to the police, who believe it is stolen coin thrown in the water by a thief. Others are of opinion that it belongs to the woman who committed suicide on the 1st instant.

The invitation from the Shanghai Cricket Club to the Kotsu Cricket Club to send over a team to play an inter-colonial match in the coming season has been accepted. Yokohama, the N. S. and New York, will probably assist in the formation of a team, and will go with the team to Peking before passing through the Aning Gate without the imposition of various and divers squeezes whereby Chinese trade is made to bleed. How the great provincial magnates acquire their fortunes the Peking Government is a seldom curious enough to inquire, so long as they pay up the calls now and again made upon them under various more or less dimly-preserved texts. When an official has climbed so high in the opinion of the Imperial Government as to render it essential that his active services should be retained even after a period of peace and power as Governor-General, he is in most cases transferred to another similar post, as was done in the case of His Excellency Chang Chin-tse, from Canton to Wuchang, and that of the Viceroy Li Hung-chang from Wuchang to Canton. The Viceroy of Chihli is an exception to the rule, chiefly we believe for the reason that Chihli being the metropolitan province it is thought desirable that there should be as few mutations in its administration as possible. Moreover it may be open to doubt whether the great Li Hung-chang, who has so long and, for himself, so very profitably held this post would care to leave it in favour of some present subordinate or possible rival. But with this exception the Viceroys are all readily removable, and few of them succeed in achieving a second term, unless under some special circumstances. This, however, is what His Excellency Liu Kien-ku, Viceroy of the Liang-Kiang, has succeeded in accomplishing, and under rather peculiar circumstances. There has been a difference between himself and the Grand Council, an official having been appointed to his viceroyalty who was never come to him. Thereupon, his three years' tenure of office being nearly completed, Liu Kien-ku tendered his resignation at the end of the term. This was not desired by the Imperial Government, who in the present condition of the Kiang provinces are anxious to retain Liu Kien-ku in Nanjing.

They have, therefore, given way—the obnoxious official is removed, and the Viceroy is re-appointed for another term of three years, being told, if course, in flattering language, that his services are indispensable to the Emperor. And so in all probability they are at the present juncture when sedition has struck deep roots in the central provinces, and it is imperative that the Government should be represented in Nanjing, the old Ming capital, by a trusted Human official. Not that we think there is any prospect of the outbreak of any formidable rebellion, but with another Viceroy less acceptable to the population, there might be trouble, the Kien-hui being quite ready and disposed to provoke it if they saw the least chance of success. What is far more important than the vagaries of this body of conspirators is the tendency any indication of disloyalty has to throw suspicion on the patriotism and loyalty of Christian converts. If the secret history of the anti-missionary outbreak in the Yangtze Valley during the past three years could be disclosed, it would, we think, be found that the Kien-hui was a faked up affair to cover a still more sinister movement, for the wholesale eviction of foreigners from the interior.

As we intimated recently, the disturbed condition of that misgoverned kingdom Korea is always liable to become the cause of complication between China and Japan, susceptible of further possible extension to Russia and England. The latter power has no personal interest in the Land of Morning Calm, as it has been rather inappropriately designated by its inhabitants; her only object, which has been consistently followed, is to prevent the peninsula being made the theatre for intrigues for the aggrandisement of Russia. For the time being, the Russian Government has acquiesced in the checkily imposed upon that advance into Korea by the opening up of that Kingdom to commercial and political intercourse with foreign Powers brought about at the suggestion of the Chinese Government. The large trading interests acquired in the peninsula are regarded by Japan, however, with jealousy with which is regarded by China as the suzerain of Korea, import another element of difficulty, if not danger, into the position. The manner in which the remains of Kim Kiun were treated on arrival in Korea while his assassin was publicly tried and honoured by the King and Government, were regarded by Japan as a direct insult directly levelled at her. However, that may be in reality, it is certain that the relations between Japan and Korea have been getting more and more strained, and now the rebellion in the latter country has afforded a pretext for the waging of troops there, and, said China follows suit by sending troops in larger numbers. No one desires to see the two great powers of the Far East involved in a trial of strength which might prove disastrous to both without bringing any lesser a definite and practical solution of their difficulties. The British Government have given proof enough of their desire to keep the two countries at peace by helping, through Sir Thomas Wade's good offices as mediator, to find a satisfactory settlement of the Fortescue difficulty in 1874, by which imminent conflict was averted. Such mediation might be more difficult now, especially if, as is quite possible, there is another hand behind the scenes working the strings.

The earliest notice of the disease now designated plague is found in a work of Orhanus, the physician to the Emperor Julian, from which it would appear that plague had been known as an endemic in Egypt and Syria from the beginning of the second century before Christ. The first recorded plague in Europe is referred to the Antonine emperor in the year 166, when the greatest pestilence known as the Black Death which swept over Europe in the fourteenth century, although presenting several of the symptoms of bubonic plague, is held by epidemiologists to have died essentially from that disease. The black death, according to those writers, was particularly dangerous in its malignant form, and was accompanied by a dangerous inflammation of the respiratory organs, and also by a violent diarrhoea. The Antonine plague, however, was apparently as compared with it, a milder form, and did not die out until the year 174.

The exodus from the Colony continues, and it is probable the population has been decreased by eight thousand. Business is practically at a standstill and Queen's Road wears a very desolate appearance as compared with its usual bustle. Numerous deaths registered as due to plague from the commencement of the disease bear amounts to 1,488.

The meeting of the Permanent Committee yesterday lasted over three hours, the principal business being the consideration of details connected with the treatment of patients from the Colony to the Orient. Dr. Lowson, with the assistance of an expert physician, will also satisfy himself that every passenger is free from contagion, and by examination will see that the patient is in a fit condition to be moved. No British subject will be permitted to embark.

The meeting of the Permanent Committee this morning was adjourned to a further inspection of the sick, and the members of the committee will be available to avail themselves of the opportunity which will commence this afternoon. Several junks have arrived for the conveyance of patients, and they will be brought to the wharf to day to receive passengers. Before leaving the authorities permit any embarkation Dr. J. A. Lowson will make a thorough inspection of the vessel to see exactly how many persons they will accommodate, and to ensure that there is sufficient comfort and attendance and native medical skill on board to minister to the requirements of the call to every shareholder. He has been properly made for the sea, that the decks have not been made in the minute book. I have looked through the minute books, and they appear to have been kept in a slowly-moving, and there is no formal record of the resolution, nor is there any record of the resolution, but there is a mention of the date of the resolution. I have looked through the minute book, and he states that the resolutions to make the calls were duly proposed by the Chairman and agreed to by the meeting, and he sent notices of the call to every shareholder. This is good evidence, I think, that the calls were duly made, and therefore I am quite satisfied that the rule of law is that even supposing that there are no minutes of the resolutions making the calls, the mere fact that such resolutions were not entered in the minute book does not prevent them from being valid ones. Now, in this case, I have the original resolution of Mr. Lyall, who made the entries in the minute book, and he states that the resolutions to make the calls were duly proposed by the Chairman.
